CALLING THE ANGELS IN.

We mean to do it. Some day, some day,
We mean to slacken this fevered rush
That is wearing our very souls away,
And grant to our goaded hearts a hush
That is holy enough to let them hear
The footsteps of angels drawing near.

We mean to do it. Oh never doubt,
When the burden of daytime broil is o'er,
We'll sit and muse, while the stars come out,
As the patriarch sat at the open door
Of his tent, with a heavenward gazing eye,
To watch for the angels passing by.

We see them afar at high noontide,
When fiercely the world's hot flashing beat,
Yet never have bidden them turn aside,
And tarry awhile in converse sweet;
Nor prayed them to hallow the cheer we spread,
To drink of our wine and break our bread.

We promised our hearts that when the stress
Of the life work reaches the longed for close,
When the weight that we groan with hinders less,
We'll loosen our thoughts to such repose
As banishes care's disturbing din,
And then—we'll call the angels in.

The day that we dreamed of comes at length,
When tired of every mocking quest,
And broken in spirit and shorn of strength,
We drop, indeed, at the door of rest,
And wait and watch as the day wanes on—
But the angels we meant to call are gone.

Indian History.

BUCHANAN VALLEY, ADAMS CO., PA.

Abduction and Massacre of the Jemison Family by the Indians in 1755.

The Story of Mary Jemison, or Deh-e-wa-mis, "The White Woman of the Genesee."

Written for the Gettysburg Compiler, BY KNOB.

CHAPTER II.

The French and Indian War.—The Abduction and Massacre—The Route over the Mountains.

The first settlements in the southwestern portion of the territory now embraced in Adams county were made by the Scotch Irish. About the year 1735 a number of families established themselves near the sources of Marsh Creek. Others soon followed, among whom, in the year 1742 or 3, were Thomas Jemison and his wife, Jane Erwin, the parents of the "White Woman," whose tragical story, as related by herself, is recorded in the little book mentioned in last week's COMPILER.

Thomas Jemison and wife were of honorable and wealthy Scotch-Irish parentage. They sought a home in the new world because of "the intestine divisions, civil wars, and ecclesiastical rigidity and domination that prevailed in those days" in their mother country. Leaving some port in the ship William and Mary, they reached in due time the city of Philadelphia. When they left the ever-green isle they had but three children, two sons and a daughter. During the voyage another daughter was born to them, whom they named Mary, whose birth upon the stormy sea foreshadowed the rough and sorrowful experiences she was subsequently called to endure.

Fond of rural life, having been bred to agricultural pursuits, Thomas Jemison soon left Philadelphia for what were then the frontiers of Pennsylvania, and settled upon an excellent tract of land lying on Marsh Creek. Being of industrious habits he soon cleared a large farm, and reaped the fruit of his labors. For a period of ten or eleven years, during which time two more sons were added to his family, this hardy pioneer led a busy and contented life in his home along the foot of the South Mountain. In referring to this period of her life Mary Jemison exclaimed: "Our home was a little paradise. The morning of my childhood's happy days will ever stand fresh in my remembrance, notwithstanding the many severe trials through which I have passed. Even at this remote period, after the lapse of nearly seventy years, the recollection of my pleasant home, of my parents, my brothers and my sister, and of the manner in which I was deprived of them all at once, affects me so powerfully that I am almost overwhelmed with grief."

In the autumn of the year 1751, Thomas Jemison moved either to another part of his farm, or to another neighborhood, a short distance from his former abode, into what is now known as Buchanan Valley. A good house and a log barn were among the improvements he found on the new farm. Among his neighbors was James Bleakney, who survived until the spring of 1821, dying in the 98th year of his age. James Bleakney was the grandfather of Mrs. Robert Bleakney visited by the Editor of the COMPILER, and subsequently by the writer. It was from this venerable ancestor that Mrs. Bleakney heard of the misfortunes of the Jemison family, and learned where their farm was located.

For about 20 years from the first settlements made on and along Marsh Creek, and in the secluded valley enclosed in the heart of the South Mountains, the sturdy settlers were allowed to sow and reap in peace. But a storm was brewing, destined to burst upon them, and for a while to drive them from their happy homes. To a consideration of this impending trouble we need to give brief attention before proceeding further with the story of Mary Jemison.

Both the French and English governments, equally intent on territorial aggrandizement in the northern section of the Western Continent, sought to secure possession of that vast territory lying between the Allegheny Mountains and the Mississippi River. The former laid claim to it by right of discovery; the latter by right of purchase from the Indians. Both parties prepared to maintain, if necessary, their real or assumed rights by force of arms. To that issue the controversy came at last. On the 3d of July, 1754, a battle was fought at Fort Necessity, or Great Meadows, about fifty miles west of the present town of Cumberland, Md., between the English and French forces, each assisted by Indian allies. The English, commanded by Col. George Washington, were defeated. This victory so elated and emboldened the French that they threatened and prepared to lay waste with fire and tomahawk the frontier settlements of Virginia and Pennsylvania, whence the white troops under Washington had been drawn.

Not long after the capitulation of Fort Necessity the situation became alarming to the peaceful settlers within and east of the South Mountain. Reports reached them of terrible atrocities committed by the French and Indians west of the mountain. Fearing that they too would soon be visited by the cruel and blood-thirsty foe, they erected for their protection the block-house, mentioned by the Bleakneys, near the present village of Arendtsville. Their apprehensions were well founded.

On the evening of a pleasant day in the spring of 1755, Mary Jemison, then 12 or 13 years of age, was sent to a neighbor's house, a distance of perhaps a mile, to procure a horse and return with it the next morning. While on this errand she had a premonition—one of those mysterious experiences that baffle explanation, and which therefore are degraded to the realm of superstition. Her relation of it is as follows: "I was out of the neighbor's house in the beginning of the evening, and saw a sheet wide spread approaching towards me, in which I was caught, as I have ever since believed, and deprived of my senses. The family soon found me on the ground, almost lifeless as they said, took me in, and made use of every remedy in their power for my recovery, but without effect till day-break, when my senses returned, and I soon found myself in good health, so that I went home with the horse very early in the morning. The appearance of that sheet I have ever considered as a forerunner of the melancholy catastrophe that so soon afterward happened to our family, and my being caught in it, I believe, was ominous of my preservation from death at the time we were captured."

Returning to her father's house in the early morning she found there a neighbor, William Buck by name, (according to the Bleakney tradition; Robert Buck, according to Watson's Annals,) and his sister-in-law with her three children. The woman, whose husband was in Washington's army fighting the French had become alarmed at the aspect of affairs, and sought companionship and safety in the house of Thomas Jemison. William Buck, wishing to get a bag of grain he had left at his own house, took the horse that Mary Jemison had brought, armed himself with a gun, and hurried away. What followed is thus related by Mary Jemison: "Our family, as usual, was busily employed about their common business. Father was shaving an axe-helve at the side of the house, mother was making preparations for breakfast, my two eldest brothers were at work near the barn, and the little ones, with myself, and the woman with her three children, were in the house." A pretty picture this. Truly a calm and peaceful rural scene; but soon to be changed into the very opposite. For Mary Jemison says further: "Breakfast was not yet ready, when we were alarmed by the discharge of a number of guns that seemed to be near. Mother and the woman before mentioned almost fainted at the report, and every one trembled with fear. On opening the door, the man and horse lay dead near the house, having just been shot by the Indians. They first secured my father, then rushed into the house, and without the least resistance made prisoners of my mother, my two younger brothers, my sister, the woman and her three children, and myself, and then commenced plundering the house. The party that took us consisted of six Indians and four Frenchmen. (The Indians were of the Shawanee tribe.) They took what they considered most valuable; consisting principally of bread, meal and meat. Having taken as much provision as they could carry, they set out with their prisoners in great haste, for fear of detection, and soon entered the woods."

The two older brothers, Thomas and John, fortunately escaped. They were at the barn when the assault took place, crept into a hollow log, as stated by James Bleakney, and so were not discovered by the keen sighted Indians. They subsequently went to Virginia, and found a home with their maternal grand father.

William Buck, the murdered man, was buried by the neighbors not far from the spot where they found his body. The burial was a hurried one, for, as we shall see, they had other pressing work in hand.

Last autumn, whilst on a visit to Buchanan Valley in company with the Editor of the COMPILER, the grave of this victim of Indian atrocity was pointed out to us. Two maple trees, standing at the edge of a shallow ravine, mark his resting place. A large pile of stones, gathered in the adjoining field, and bordering the grave, may serve as a rude and unpolished monument. The house and barn occupied and owned by the unfortunate Jemison family have both succumbed to the ravages of time, and no vestige remains to tell where they once stood. A few gnarled and decaying apple trees, so old that no one now living there can tell when they were planted, testify that once near by there stood a habitation. But that solitary grave beside the maple trees, with its cairn-like monument, and its tragic history, is not forgotten. With some hesitation I venture to relate what was told me, viz: that those who plow among the old apple trees are wont to uncover a spot where the soil has the color of blood, as if it indicated the exact place where the kindly earth received the crimson drops trickling from the wounds of poor William Buck!

Anticipating pursuit, the ten savage captors, with their ten helpless captives, fled rapidly in a westward direction across the mountains. The pitiful story of the first day's journey is thus told by Mary Jemison: "On our march that day an Indian went behind us with a whip, with which he frequently lashed the children to make them keep up. In this manner we traveled until dark without a mouthful of food or a drop of water; although we had not eaten since the night before. Whenever the little children cried for water, the Indians would make them drink urine or go thirsty. At night they encamped in the woods without fire and without shelter, where we were watched with the greatest vigilance. Extremely fatigued, and very hungry, we were compelled to lie upon the ground supperless and without a drop of water to satisfy the cravings of our appetites. Fatigue alone brought us a little sleep for the refreshment of our weary limbs." At the dawn of the following day the sorrowful march was resumed, and not until the sun had risen were the prisoners halted and fed. "The Indians gave us a full breakfast of provision that they had brought from my father's house. Each of us being very hungry partook of this bounty of the Indians, except father, who was so much overcome with his situation, so much exhausted by anxiety and grief, that silent despair fastened upon his countenance, and he could not be prevailed upon to refresh his sinking nature by the use of a morsel of food. Our repast being finished, we again resumed our march, and before noon passed a small fort which my father said was called Fort Canagojigge." (The location of Fort Conococheague is not definitely known.)

Towards evening of the second day's flight they arrived at the border of a "dark and dismal swamp," covered with small hemlocks, or some other evergreen, and other bushes, into which they were conducted; and having gone a short distance they encamped for the night. As soon as the supper of bread and meat was finished, an Indian approached Mary, took off her shoes and stockings, and put a pair of moccasins on her feet. The same service was done to the little son of Mrs. Buck. The watchful mother, rightfully divining that the Indians intended to spare the life of her daughter, counseled her not to forget her English tongue, her own name, and the name of her father, nor the prayers she had been taught; an admonition that was remembered and obeyed.

In some way the savages ascertained that avengers were on their track. A determined band of neighbors, headed by a Mr. Fields, had started in pursuit and were gaining on the fugitives. Fearing to be overtaken if they continued to encumber themselves with so many prisoners, the savages (Indians and French,) massacred and scalped eight of them, viz: Thomas Jemison, his wife, their daughter Betsy, their two sons Robert and Matthew, Mrs. Buck, and two of her children. Mary Jemison, and the little son of Mrs. Buck, were spared for further sufferings. The naked and mangled bodies of the slaughtered victims were found in that dismal swamp by the party that had gone in pursuit.

Mary Jemison and the boy did not witness the massacre, an Indian having led them further into the swamp out of sight of the dark deed. Not until the following evening did she learn positively what had become of the other members of the family. After a hard day's march they encamped for the night in a dense thicket. Having built a fire the Indians took from their baggage a number of scalps which they cleaned and prepared as is their wont. The work was witnessed by the orphaned children. Mary says: "Those scalps I knew by the color of the hair. My mother's hair was red; and I could easily distinguish my father's and the children's from each other. The sight was most appalling; yet, I was obliged to endure it without complaining."

After the massacre the Indians continued their flight much more cautiously than they did at first. How they managed to baffle their pursuers is thus related: "One of them went behind and with a long staff picked up all the grass and weeds that we trailed down by going over them. Each weed was so nicely placed in its natural position that no one would have suspected we had passed that way. It is the custom of the Indians when scouting, or on private expeditions, to step carefully, and where no impression of their feet can be left, shunning wet or muddy ground. They seldom take hold of a brush or limb, and never break one. By such precautions they completely elude the sagacity of their pursuers."

It is a wonder that Mary Jemison was able to endure the hardships, the exposure and the mental agony of that dreadful march. Several times she became so weary, and so benumbed by wet and cold, that she was nigh unto death. For two days of the journey there was so heavy a storm of snow and rain, that they were obliged to stop and build a shelter of boughs. On the sixth day they were joined by another party of six Indians who also had been to the frontier settlements, and brought with them as prisoner a young white man, who was very tired and dejected. After a journey of seven and a half days they reached Fort Du Quesne, or Fort Pitt, now Pittsburg. This Fort was a rallying point for the French and Indians. As they neared this historic spot the Indians performed some customs on their prisoners which they deemed necessary. They combed their hair, and painted their faces and hair red, in the finest style of savage art. Then they led them into the Fort and shut them up for the night.

ADDENDA.

1. In "Watson's Annals" there is a brief mention of the abduction of the Jemison family. Among "sundry facts gleaned from the New York Mercury, &c., from 1755 to 1763," the following item occurs:

"1758, York County, April 5. Three Indians were seen this day near Thomas Jemison's, at the head of Marsh Creek. After the alarm was given six men proceeded to Jemison's house, and found Robert Buck killed and scalped—all the rest of the family are missing. The same day a person going to Shippenstown saw a number of Indians. These facts have caused much alarm."

There is a discrepancy as to the date between the Bleakney tradition, corroborated by Mary Jemison's narrative, and Watson's Annals. The former give 1755 as the year in which the abduction took place; the latter has 1758. As the fact of the abduction is beyond question, and it is with that we are concerned, we will leave to others, who may be so disposed, to settle the question of date.

2. With thanks to the Editor, Mr. John M. Cooper, we clip the following from the Chambersburg Valley Spirit, of a recent date:

"Fort Conococheague.—A friend in an adjoining county writes to us as follows: 'Where was Fort Conococheague in old Indian times? You had Fort Chambers at Chambersburg. May it not also have been known as Fort Conococheague?' The subject being one that may interest our readers, we have concluded to answer our friend through the local column of our paper.

"Mr. McCauly, in his excellent history of Franklin County, gives the following list of early frontier Forts in this county: 'Fort Steele, at the White Church, near Mercersburg; fort Loudon, near Loudon; fort McDowell, near Bridgeport; for McCord, near Parnell's Knob; fort Chambers, at Chambersburg; fort Davis, at Davis' Knob; fort Armstrong, north east of Loudon; fort McCallister, near Roxbury; fort McConnel, south of Strasburg.' He adds that there were 'a number of other private fortifications at various other points, of which very little is now known.'

"As Mr. McCauley was very painstaking and careful, we presume his list of frontier Forts in this county is as accurate as it could be made at this time. There is no 'Fort Conococheague' in his list, and we are strongly disposed to think that if ever there was a fort in this county which was designated by that name, it must have been Mr. Chambers' fort at this place. This was the heart of the 'Conococheague settlement,' and this point, before the town of Chambersburg was laid out, was commonly referred to as 'Canegojig,' that being the then prevalent pronunciation of the name. Fort Steele, fort Loudon and fort McDowell were either on or near the West Conococheague, but we believe Mr. Chambers' fort at this place was the only fort on the east or main stream of the Conococheague in this county. We think it the only one to which the name of 'Fort Conococheague' is likely to have been applied.

"There may have been a fort of that name at or near the mouth of the Conococheague in Maryland, but we have at present no source to which we can go for information on this point."

SPEAK LOW.

We know some houses well built and handsomely furnished, where it is not pleasant to be even a visitor. Sharp, angry tones resound through them from morning until night, and the influence is as contagious as the measles, and much more to be dreaded in the household. The children catch it and it lasts for life. A friend has such a neighbor within hearing of her house, and even Poll Parrot has caught the tone, and delights in screaming and scolding, until she has been sent into the country to improve her habits. Where the mother sets the example, you will scarcely hear a pleasant word among the children in their play with each other. Yet the discipline of such a family is weak and irregular. The children expect so much scolding before they do anything they are bidden, while in many a home where the low, firm voice of the mother, or a decided look of her eye is law, they never think of disobedience, either in or out of her sight.

Oh, mothers! It is worth a great deal to cultivate that excellent thing in woman, a low sweet voice. If you are ever so much tried by the mischievous or willful pranks of the little ones, speak low. It will be a great help to you even to try to be cheerful, if you cannot succeed. Anger makes you wretched and your children also. Impatient angry tones never did the heart good, but plenty of evil. Read what Solomon says of them, and remember what he wrote with that inspired pen. You cannot have the excuse that they lighten your burdens, for they make them ten times as heavy. For your own as well as your children's sake, learn to speak low. They will remember that tone when you are under the willow. So, too, will they remember a harsh and angry voice.

THEY have a curious kind of speed-recording machine on the Wisconsin Central Railroad, and the other day one of the trainmen took one to a German watchmaker's for repairs. The thing is kept in a peculiar-shaped cast-iron box, and Dutchy thought it was an infernal machine that might blow up the whole establishment. The railroad employe, placing the recorder on the counter, was surprised to see the old gentleman point toward the door. Not exactly understanding what this meant, he opened his mouth to state his errand, and was still more astonished to hear Hans exclaim in a very determined tone: "Took it owut!" "I want to have it fixed." "I tole you, took it owut!" said Hans. "Let me show you the clock," said the railroad man, proceeding to open the box. "No clock there!" replied Hans. "I tole you, took it owut!" "Why, yes, there is," expostulated the trainman; "just look here," and he made a move to open the box, but Hans headed him off. Jerking an old musket from under the counter, he leveled it at the astonished railroader and yelled: "Donder and blitzen! I tole you, took it owut! You can't blay only such dricks ofer me! Und now, I tole you, took it owut, or I plows your plame het off!"

THE Chief of the Bureau of Statistics reports that the value of exports of live animals of all kinds from the United States increased from $5,844,653 during the year ending June 30, 1878, to $11,487,754 during the year ending June 30, 1879. Of the total exports of live animals during the last fiscal year, 71 per cent. were sent to Great Britain. The value of exports of cattle increased from $3,896,818 during the year ending June 30, 1878, to $8,379,200 during the year ending June 30, 1879. Of the total exports of cattle during the last fiscal year 79 per cent. were shipped to Great Britain. The value of cattle exported to Great Britain increased from $2,408,843 during the year ending June 30, 1878, to $6,616,114 during the year ending June 30, 1879.

DELAWARE has the queerest hog in the country. It is near Georgetown. At hog-killing time recently this hog was stuck in the neck with a butcher knife, and rolled over as if dead, becoming perfectly rigid. The butchers started to kill the next hog, when the supposed dead hog jumped up and ran away. It was not seen for a whole day, when it returned to its pen. It is still living, though the wound was of the kind that in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred would have been instantly fatal.

HIS FIVE MOTHERS-IN-LAW.

A REAL TRUE STORY.

Most husbands and wives, if we may credit all they say, find it difficult to live in the same house with a mother-in-law, but Old Sol B — (as he was commonly called) of Boston, dwelt in peace and comfort for several years with five ladies bearing that relation to him.

When I first knew the old gentleman he appeared to be about fifty, but was in reality sixty-eight, and had a charming wife who was then twenty-six and two lovely children, a boy and girl, one seven and the other five. His children by his first wife were all married, and some of his grandchildren were also married and, themselves, had children older than Mr. B—'s two youngest.

On the first day of my visit to his pleasant home not many miles from Boston, as I took my place at the dinner table with Mrs. B —, I was surprised to see five old ladies come into the room together and to be introduced to each of them as follows: "My own mother, Mrs. B —, senior; my next mother, Mrs. Henry; my third mother, Mrs. James; my fourth mother, Mrs. William; my fifth mother, Mrs. John."

"Mrs. B—, senior," who seemed the youngest of the old ladies, laughed aloud at my look of consternation—a melodious laugh for one of her years—and every one smiled but Mr. B—, who invoked the blessing with his usual air and led the table-talk on indifferent topics. That evening in the parlor young Mrs. B— gave us some music, and the old ladies retired early one after another, the "own mother" going last, tenderly assisted up stairs by her son. On his return Mr. B— said to me with a smile of amusement:

"I see that you are, as the ladies say, 'dying to know what all this means.' I purposely did not tell you that I have five mothers-in-law, because I always like to see the effect produced by my household on other people. You, for instance, live so differently, all alone, how do we appear to you?"

"Harmonious and happy; but I have seen you together only a very short time. What is your everyday experience?"

"Much the same, especially since my dear wife came into our household. I had all the old ladies when she arrived."

"But where did you get them all; they cannot all belong to you?"

"Yes, every one of them. I have four mothers-in-law, and as my own mother is my wife's mother-in-law, of course that makes five mothers-in-law in our house. Now, as my wife is just gone to her little ones' nursery, I will tell you about my old ladies.

"When I married my first wife, her mother, who was a widow, came to live with us. She was a good creature, and had seen pretty hard times, having supported herself by school teaching and sewing for several years, and she seemed greatly to enjoy my comfortable home—I was always a thriving man of business. So one day I said to her, 'Now, mother, there is no reason why you shouldn't make your home with us always while you live; you can bring your own furniture, if you choose, or you need not; the room you now occupy shall be your own always; besides what my wife may do I will give you fifty dollars a year for your clothes (that was an ample sum for a woman to have all to herself in those times). You can teach if you wish to, or do anything else to earn money if you wish to; you will always be welcome to our table and parlor, or if you prefer, you can cook for yourself in your own room. Only one thing I will exact in return—you must never make any mischief nor quarrel with anybody in my house about anything. And if sometimes you are displeased you must go to your room and pout it out alone, and only join us again when you feel pleasant. For I won't be worried, and least of all will I have my wife worried by anybody. Now, mother, what do you say?'

"She only said, 'You are a good man, Solomon B—, and the Almighty will reward you, and I thank you from my heart. I will do my part.'

"So I never had any trouble with her. We all lived together twenty years, and then my wife had an attack of pneumonia and died—and soon after that my own mother was left a widow and came to live with me. My mother is only sixteen years older than I am, and being so lively and smart she seemed quite like a younger sister to mother Henry, and they got on quite easily together. But after awhile when the children were all about grown, I got so lonesome that I coaxed a real nice sensible lady of Philadelphia, not handsome, but just as good as gold, to marry me. I told her all about my old ladies and found she had two mothers living with her, her own mother and her husband's mother. They had neither of them any property, but she owned a house and took boarders in it to support them all.

"Well, I made the same proposition to her old ladies that I had made to my mother-in-law and they both agreed. Then I went home and built an addition to my house, and soon brought my second wife to her mothers there. We had some occasional pouting first, but I always held two points without yielding—I was the master in my own house and would never let anybody worry my wife. So, pretty soon, my four-in-hand learned to travel smoothly together.

"Ah, me! I looked forward to a happy old age with that dear wife, but in two years she was killed by a railway accident. I was with her on the train and was badly hurt, lying for weeks in a state of unconsciousness. When I recovered my dear wife's grave was green. I felt so bad and my health was so poor that I did not care for a woman again until my children were all married and I was left alone with my four old ladies. Then I met a pretty little romantic widow, who was 'so sorry' for me! She wrote poetry and painted pictures, and was dying all the while of consumption—that scourge of our city; and I thought as she had a struggle to take care of herself and her husband's mother, I would smooth her passage to the grave.

"So I married her and her mother—I mean—well, you know what I mean. I treated her mother-in-law just as I did the other old ladies, and that wife lived seven years after all. I made her so happy that she adored me, and we had the sweetest baby you ever saw! Oh, what a lovely creature that child was—a little angel!—She lived only three years, and then faded away. But I have several beautiful pictures of her painted by her mother."

"And did you have no trouble with that mother-in-law?"

"Not while her daughter-in-law lived; she was always taking care of her sick child and grandchild. But when Emma was gone and all seemed quiet again, the old lady wanted to marry me!"

"What! Emma's mother-in-law?"

"Yes. She was a handsome woman still and she knew it; about my age and no relation whatever; so she set her cap for me."

"And that made a commotion in the house?"

"Well, yes. Yes, it did. I never knew my mother to go into a rage till then. She was mad! She told me to go right off and get a young wife—the younger the better! Then I got mad! I stormed away at all my old ladies together; threatened to break up housekeeping and turn them out upon the world, away from the pleasant home which they had enjoyed so long that they really believed it to be theirs. Finally I declared I would leave them in it to fight like Kilkenny cats, while I would live at a hotel in the city. And I kept my word. I lived at one hotel after another, but always went home on Saturday nights to go to church the next morning as usual, and take my old ladies for a drive in the afternoon as usual, so that the neighbors should not be gossiping about us.

"How good they were to me, then!—They lived together like a nest of kittens! But my mother assured me that peace would not last long if I lived at home with out a wife; so when I met a pretty little orphan girl who had not a relative in the world I told her all about my affairs, and the sweet creature with tears of pity in her eyes consented to marry me and be good to my old ladies. And she has kept her word, both in letter and spirit, and I am thankful that life has given me so many blessings!"

Just then young Mrs. B— returned, and though I observed through the evening that her manner toward her husband was more that of a beloved and loving daughter than of a wife, yet she appeared more serenely happy than any woman I remember to have seen.

This story is from life excepting that I have changed all the names. So B— has been dead for some years; the will he left was as just and manly as his other acts.

HIS NEW FLYING MACHINE.

An enterprising saloon-keeper is always on the lookout for any novelty that may draw customers, and perhaps this fact may have been known to a bland-faced old man who entered the place the other day and confidentially began in Columbia:

"If I could draw a crowd of one hundred men to your place here, what sum would you be willing to give me?"

"What do you mean?" asked the saloonist.

"If it was known that I had in my possession a flying machine, and that it was to fly from your door here on a certain day and hour, wouldn't the novelty be sure to collect a thirsty crowd?"

"Yes, I think so. If you have a flying machine and want to show it off here to-morrow night, I'll give you a dollar, and if the machine is a success, perhaps, I'll buy it."

"Well, sir," continued the old man in a whisper, "I've got the boss! She flies from the word go. All I've got to do is to toss her into the air, and away she sails. It's right down fine, and no chance for failure, and I'll be on hand at seven o'clock to morrow night."

The matter became noised about, and next evening there were fifty or sixty people in and around the saloon to witness the experiment. The old man arrived on time, having some sort of a bundle under his arm, and he collected his dollar of the saloonist and secured several treats from the crowd. When everything was finally ready he stood on the walk clear of the spectators and said:

"Gentlemen, I warrant this thing to fly. I didn't invent it myself; but I am acting as State agent to dispose of county rights. Hundreds of men have spent years of anxious thought and thousands of dollars in seeking to invent flying machines, but this one leads them all. She will now fly. Please stand back and give her a chance to rise."

The crowd fell back, and the man let fall the cover hiding his bundle, and gave an old speckled hen a toss in the air. She uttered a dismal squeak, sailed this way and that, and finally bumped against a telegraph post, and settled down on the roof of a low shed, cackling in an indignant manner at being turned loose in a strange neighborhood. It was full a minute before the crowd was sure that it was a hen, and during that minute the old man is supposed to have run a distance of seven blocks. A few tried to overhaul him, but it was no use.

THERE is a strong likelihood that the Commission which is now considering the expediency and practicability of forming an international park at Niagara Falls will decide in the affirmative, and that Lord Dufferin's happy thought will ultimately be carried out. This is gratifying news. Such a magnificent phenomenon of nature as the Falls should be freely open to the enjoyment and admiration of the whole world instead of, as at present, being prostituted to mercenary uses. Such is the imposition now practised upon visitors that a man of moderate means must think twice before taking the trip, and even those to whom money is no object are annoyed and distracted by sordid importunities. By all means let us have an international park.

THE judge of a court in Maine recently sentenced a culprit to twenty-five years in the State prison. The fact was communicated to the prisoner's mother, who was struck with the magnitude of the sentence. "What did they do that for?" she exclaimed. "Twenty-five years! Why, he won't be contented there three weeks!"

EXCAVATED WONDERS OF POMPEII.

Eighteen hundred years ago the city was full of life. Nearly 30,000 people promenaded its streets, and it was a scene of Roman luxury and voluptuousness. Its situation on the sea made it a most fashionable place of resort for the wealthy Romans, and the Emperor Claudius had his pleasure house there, and the great Cicero his residence.—About one hundred years ago the entombed city was discovered, and immediate action was taken to excavate as much of the ruins as possible.

The work has been going steadily on, but more than one-half the city has not yet been exhumed. Still, many acres have been dug over, and miles of streets have been brought to the light of day.

The city is now a perfect picture of a Roman city 1800 years ago. The streets are narrow, some of them not being more than eight feet across, but they are straight and regular. The pavement is composed of large flat stones or blocks of lava, and the deep cuts in them by the Roman chariots are clearly perceptible. At the crossings are large stepping stones for the use of pedestrians, so as keep their feet from the mud. Every thing in the streets was silent and deathlike. There were no human beings in the houses; no promenaders in the streets; all were deserted. The dwelling houses are generally small and one-storied.

In one of the kitchens was found a fowl put into the skillet, and a stew pan containing a small pig for roasting, all prepared eighteen hundred years ago. In the "House of the Vestals," upon the door sill, is the word "Slave," (Welcome.) A mosaic with the representation of a fierce dog, with the inscription "Cave Canem," (Beware of the Dog,) is near the threshold of the "House of the Tragic Poet." In the streets are many shops which still have the signs over the doorways. In the baker's shop a batch of loaves was found which had been in the oven since the 24th of August, A. D. 79. The mill was turned by horse power.

The various temples that have been exhumed contain idols made of marble, silver and gold. Three hundred skeletons were discovered in the temple of Juno, all crowded together and buried beneath the ashes.

The amphitheatre, which is about a half mile from the present excavations, is in a splendid state of preservation. It is built of stone, is in the form of the Colliseum at Rome, and was used for the gladiatorial shows. It is 430 feet long by 335 wide. The stone steps seat 14,000 spectators. Playcards with the announcement of theatrical performances are still to be seen on the walls. The "Villa of Diomede," so called because a tomb bearing that name was found near by, and for this reason it was supposed to have belonged to a Diomede, is one that has been rendered famous by Bulwer's description of it. It stands just outside the "Herculaneum Gate," and the supposed owner was discovered in his garden with a bunch of keys and a purse filled with gold and silver coin in his hands. In the collar of Diomede's house, huddled together in a corner, were found eighteen skeletons, mostly females, supposed to have been members of the family.

Over 600 human skeletons have already been exhumed, but fortunately most of the inhabitants managed to escape, having heeded the warning of the burning mountain. Only the bones remain of the victims, the flesh having mostly perished, but now and then a little tuft of mouldy hair has been found clinging to the skull. The positions of the bodies in every possible form of contortion all indicate a violent death—one of agony and suffering. A miser was found grasping a bag of gold in his hand.

In one room a family group embracing each other in death; in another the bones of dancing girls, mingled with the broken instruments of music can be seen; in another place the skeleton of a cook at his place near the stove in the kitchen. Outside the gates, in his sentry-box, stands a Roman soldier in complete armor, with the key to the city gate in his hand. After standing faithfully at his post for seventeen centuries, he was discovered "clad in rustic armor," the helmet on his empty skull, and the spear in his bony fingers. In the city prison, not far distant, were found the prisoners, some with their "feet made fast in the stocks."—Christian at Work.

THE THIRD TERM.—The Harrisburg correspondent of the Philadelphia Chronicle says: General Grant has signified his intention of stopping over here for a night. Our Mayor at his meeting Thursday nominated quite a number of prominent Democrats on the Reception Committee. Only a few attended the meeting of the citizens. The fact is, that the majority of the Republican party are opposed to the nomination of Grant for a third term. If this demonstration has any signification that way, we as Republicans and as Democrats don't want to be counted in. We all respect Grant as a soldier, but as President of the United States for a third term we cannot give our allegiance. The sooner Grant finds this out the better it will be for himself and the country. The people of Pennsylvania are unalterably opposed to any demonstration in his favor that has within it any political significance. If the emoluments of office is what he is after we will raise by subscription $200,000—his salary for four years. Our Mayor, if he expects to make any political capital from the movement, will be mistaken, as thousands of political aspirants have been before. We say, irrespective of party, no third term for genuine born American citizens, and we will resist it as long as life remains to defend the right against the wrong, for a third term in a Republican form of government means a monarchy.

MATT. CARPENTER is afraid the Democrats will count in a Democratic President in 1881. You're right, Matt. They will, and they'll do it because the people will elect him in 1880.—Boston Post.

IT turns out that the dispatch from Delta, Louisiana, announcing the hanging of a Republican politician and the whipping of others, was a lie out of the whole cloth. The southern outrage mill is not turning out much grist just now.—Patriot.

WHAT do the organs think of that Louisiana outrage by this time? We want to see our esteemed contemporary, the Press, gather up that column of tears it spilled yesterday.—Phila. Chronicle.

MR. GRANT should send a cable message to the Czar of Russia congratulating him on his escape from assassination. There is a tender chord of sympathy binding all the great rulers of the earth and Grant should give out some evidence that this chord has been rudely twanged.—Balt. Gazette.

A SHORT session of congress and no nonsense is what the people want.

MR. BLACKBURN, of Kentucky, regards the Southern Grant boom as "the insane inspiration of a few jackasses."

BOSTON elects Prince, Democrat, to the Mayoralty by 2,763 majority.—Charleston, S. C., also goes heavily Democratic.

LATER returns say Louisiana has rolled up a Democratic majority of about 20,000. The new Constitution has been adopted by a large majority. Louisiana won't be cheated by the stalwarts next year.

SENATOR RANDOLPH, of New Jersey, assures his friends on the Democratic side that they need be in no fear as to the result in his State next year. He says Jersey is good for ten thousand Democratic majority in 1880, and that a Democrat will succeed him in the U. S. Senate.

MR. SINGLETON, of Mississippi, who has just returned to Washington, says that he favors Seymour for the nomination, but that with Indiana and New York the Democracy can win in 1880 with anybody as a candidate. He says the Republicans will get no Southern state; the Democrats have them and mean to keep them.

WM. E. CHANDLER, of New Hampshire, writes to the New York Tribune a summons for "another earnest, enthusiastic and final struggle to keep the rebels out of control of the national government." He sees 136 electoral votes certain against the Republicans, and wails because New York and Indiana are likely to be carried by the "Confederate Democracy." The Republican leaders know that the outlook for their party is far from what they would have their rank and file believe.

REV. JOHN M. TITZEL, of Irwin, Pa., has accepted a call to the Reformed church at Altoona.

AN ISSUE.—This is the way the Brooklyn Times, an able and independent Republican paper, puts it:

What does the Democratic party now want? It wants an issue still. To this end its newspapers of the North, and its Brigadiers and Congressmen of the South, want the Republican party to renominate General Grant—that means a third term—which would give them an issue, and one, we are sure, that could and would be made most effective. A fight against a third term as being against the example of Washington, and Jefferson, and Madison, and Monroe, and Jackson and even of Lincoln, could not fail to be potent in its influence upon the thinking and sober men of the nation, as it would virtually open the door to a life-tenure to the Presidency, and would at one step serve, or powerfully tend, to change the nature and genius of our free institutions.

And the Pottsville Chronicle chimes in:

If the Republican party see fit to make Grant their candidate for President, believing he is the only man they can elect, that is purely a political issue for themselves to determine, and when they take their position they will find the Democratic party prepared to meet them with the record of Grant's civil administration, the most incompetent, corrupt and venal that ever disgraced the country.

The Springfield Republican calls attention to the fate of the Presidential "boom" of 1844. There was one of tremendous proportions for Henry Clay, but he was defeated by James K. Polk; and the Republican wants it understood that the Republican party will invite defeat if it nominates a candidate whom the independent voters, and the Republicans represented by the Cornell scratchers in New York, will not support. No Grant "boom" for them.

THE Philadelphia Press states that "Senator Wallace has indicated a determination to have an equal share in the selection of the supervisors of the census in Pennsylvania," and that it is also alleged that a caucus of Democratic senators has determined to reject appointments of supervisors if the claims of the Democrats are not recognized by the appointing power. This is a startling innovation in the opinion of the Press. We must be permitted, however, to remind that journal that during the presidency of Andrew Johnson the Republicans of the senate adopted a similar rule which they enforced most rigidly, and the president was then obliged in making appointments of assessors and collectors of internal revenue to divide the offices equally between his own party and the Republicans. If he failed to do this his appointments were invariably rejected. The Press argues that "these supervisors of the census are more administrative officers concerning whom the senate has no right to ask any questions except such as refer to personal fitness, to integrity of character and to mental and moral qualifications." So, too, were the assessors and collectors of internal revenue "mere administrative officers," but the editor of the Press never made a word of objection against the rule adopted by the Republican senate in 1866-7 under which President Johnson's appointments were rejected or confirmed on political considerations.—Patriot.

THE Democratic delegate elections of Philadelphia took place on Tuesday week, and a disgraceful scene was enacted in the Fifth Ward, in which, according to published accounts, Alderman McMullen participated. A man named Charles Myers was shot through the head, and Bernard Riley was fatally injured and died on his way to the hospital. The ward convention was broken up and some arrests were made, and it is hoped that whoever is guilty of such outrageous conduct may be promptly brought to justice and punished to the full extent of the law. In this country there can be no excuse for any violence at elections or primary political meetings. Alderman McMullen has been arrested and held to bail on a charge of assault and battery with intent to kill.

As the Pottsville Chronicle says: The Democracy of the rural districts are no longer willing to rest under the reproach brought upon the organization at large by these disgraceful squabbles in Philadelphia. It is bad enough that they should fight incessantly over their local offices, but when it comes to questions of State and national policy it is a matter on which the Democracy at large will demand the right to exercise a controlling voice.

THE report of Kluklux horrors telegraphed from New Orleans Thursday night about affairs in Madison Parish, La., is pronounced false in every particular. R. H. Brown, the man reported hanged, was at home at Tallula, La., last evening, well and hearty. The other cases reported are on a par with that of Brown. The election passed off more quietly than has been known for years.—Baltimore Sun of Saturday.

The amount of lying done by the stalwarts (disunionists) to keep up bad feeling between the north and the south has hardly been equalled since the world began. That anybody should be deceived by it shows wilful blindness.

THE Peace Commission of the Reformed Church of the United States closed its session at Harrisburg on Wednesday night week, having been sitting one week. The Communion of the Lord's Supper was observed as a proper close to the labors of the Commission, and the occasion was deeply solemn. The results, which will be given to the press very soon, were unanimously reached, and are of such a nature as to be perfectly satisfactory. A pastoral letter will be issued by the Commission, containing conclusions on the following topics, viz: Doctrine, culture and government. It is reported that the common surprise of its members when they brought themselves to the same standpoint was how little there really was of vital difference between them.

THE sale, by the city of Philadelphia, of 59,149 shares of Pennsylvania Railroad stock, to that company, was consummated a few days ago. The price paid was $50 per share, or par value. The series of transactions terminated by this sale have been very advantageous to the city, as it has received, since the original subscriptions to 100,000 shares were made, about thirty-three years ago, $6,130,731 more than the income that would have been derived from steady payments of six per cent. upon the original cost of the stock. Independent of this direct financial benefit, the growth of Philadelphia has been promoted, and her manufacturing and commercial welfare fostered, by the operations of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, to an extent that can scarcely be over estimated. But in view of the necessity imposed on the city of funding her floating debt, and hereafter avoiding the creation of new liabilities, it was natural that some of her financial authorities felt disposed to sell the stock which had been such a useful and profitable investment; and the present financial condition of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company rendered it equally natural that it should become the purchaser of the stock held by Philadelphia.—Railway World.

COL. RALPH L. ROLLAND, now in the Eastern Penitentiary of Pennsylvania for complicity in the attempt to rob the Chambersburg National Bank, has been simulating insanity in order to secure his removal to the State Insane Asylum. A few days ago he sprang at one of the keepers with a sharpened case knife, but was covered with a Colt's revolver. When the keeper had taken the knife from him Rolland leaped over the corridor railing, falling a distance of twenty feet, and made a dash for the main entrance of the institution. He was soon carried, wriggling, back to his cell.

THE Czar of Russia has just escaped again. This time they attempted to blow up the train in which he was going to Moscow, but the explosion did not occur until after he had passed the dangerous point. The train containing his majesty's baggage, however, was blown sky-high.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Correspondence of the Gettysburg Compiler.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8, 1879.

Congress is now under way, with every indication that it means to give us a business session. There was nothing specially interesting or noteworthy in the opening, beyond the fact that the roll-call on the first day revealed an unusual number of absentees in both houses. Many of them have since arrived, however. It seemed to me that there was a greater degree of cordiality and friendliness in the greetings of members than I have generally noticed heretofore. The hottest contestants in debate last session were the most demonstrative. Thurman and Edmunds, both of whom left the extra session in bad health, come back looking better than they have for years. Senator Conkling, however, does not look the better for a rest, if indeed he has had any rest. He looks older and grayer, and Matt Carpenter looks pale, bloated and worn.

The message of Mr. Hayes is probably one of the weakest State papers ever sent to Congress. The little interest that might have attached to its reading was destroyed by the premature publication of it in New York, Cincinnati, and Chicago Sunday morning, thirty-six hours before Congress met. By whom it was stolen is not known, but because these newspapers paid the thief $500 each for copies Mr. Hayes proposes to shut the correspondents out of the clerk's room at the White House. Perhaps one of his clerks was the guilty party. The portion of the message treating of civil-service reform excited positive derision. Republicans and Democrats alike laughed at it. When Mr. Hayes was a candidate his utterances on this subject commanded respect, and even when he issued his famous "Order No. 1!" he was given credit for at least sincerity; but in view of the performances of himself and Cabinet, and the severe contempt shown for the matter by office-holders all over the country, Hayes would certainly have shown good taste and good sense by omitting all further reference to the subject. His cant is the sheerest hypocrisy, and it is on a par with the hollow pretense of "competitive examinations" kept up in some of the Departments. The idea is held out that the applicant's chances for appointment are in proportion to his proficiency, or standing on the list after examination, while as a matter of fact "influence" of the right sort is the only real test applied in practice. The whole thing is dishonest, and dishonesty is not reform.

The financial recommendations in the message have met with a cool reception even from Mr. Hayes' own party, and a careful canvass of the House by Mr. Chittenden, of New York, develops the fact that there are not twenty members of either party, or both parties combined, who will vote for the proposition to retire greenbacks. While there will probably be some discussion of the subject, it is safe to predict that there will be no important change in existing financial relations. On this point the Democrats are more united than their opponents, and the agitation of the subject threatens more disturbance in the Radical ranks than anywhere else.

Congressmen of all parties are evidently in an earnest business-like frame of mind, and there is not likely to be much "foolishness," for the present at least. The political situation leaves no margin for blunders on either side, and I notice that Blaine and Garfield and the other Republican leaders are not manifesting the usual desire to "draw out" the Democrats. They apparently think it more safe to lay low for ducks, for it is not unlikely that any attempt to stir up a general political muss would prove more disastrous to them than to the Democrats, who are disposed to shape the business of the session in the best interests of the country, North, South, East and West. PRONO.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Worms. Worms. Worms.

E. F. Kunkel's Worm Syrup never fails to remove all kinds of Worms—Pin, Seat, Thread and Stomach Worms. Symptoms—The usual symptoms of worms are intestinal irritation, pains in the belly, irritation or itching at the lower end of the bowels, alternations of diarrhœa and costiveness, great thirst, variable and often voracious appetite. The patient sometimes becomes hungry almost immediately after eating heartily, and at other times the appetite is feeble and depraved, soliciting strange articles, as dirt, chalk, &c. There is a fetid breath, the complexion is pale or sallow, with occasional flushes, swelling of the upper lip, a livid circle around the eyes, dilation or contraction of the pupil, enlargement of the patient's belly. The sleep is disturbed, he often starts and awakes with terror, grinds his teeth, picks his nose, and has a dry cough, and headache, slow fever and spasmodic or convulsive affections. To these may be added a slow irregular Remittent Fever, which, while it continues, is attended with great drowsiness. There is pain in the bowels and at the pit of the stomach, with occasional purging. The head is also affected. There is wild, the pupil dilated, the ala of the nose contracted, the cheeks flushed, and the forehead polished, as if glazed. There is often a very strange alternation of the voice, and in some instances a total loss of speech. Worms may also be suspected in children where there is emaciation, and especially weakness of the bowels, accompanied by discharges of slime or mucus. All these symptoms and more, come from worms. E. F. Kunkel's Worm Syrup never fails to remove them. Price, $1.00 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. (For Tape Worm write and consult the Doctor.)—For all others, buy of your druggist the Worm Syrup, and if he has it not, send to Dr. E. F. Kunkel, 259 N. Ninth St., Philadelphia, Pa. Advice by mail free; send three-cent stamp.

E. F. Kunkel's Bitter Wine of Iron.

A sure cure for dyspepsia or indigestion, weak stomach, general debility, diseases of the nervous system, constipation, acidity of the stomach, and for all cases requiring a tonic. Every bottle guaranteed, or money refunded. Price, $1.00 per bottle, or six bottles for $5.00. Ask for E. F. Kunkel's Bitter Wine of Iron and take no other. If your druggist has it not, send to proprietor, E. F. Kunkel, 259 N. Ninth St., Philadelphia, Pa. Advice free; enclose three-cent stamp.

A GOOD FARM AT PRIVATE SALE.

THE undersigned, intending to change climate on account of bad health, offers his FARM at private sale. It is situated in Butler township, Adams county, Pa., 1½ miles from the thriving village of Arendtsville and about the same distance from Middletown, adjoining lands of Moses Raffensperger, Hezekiah Lar, Henry Dearborff, Thomas Fisher and others, containing 111 ACRES and 22 PERCHES of farming land and 15 acres of good TIMBER LAND lying 2½ miles from the farm. The improvements are a good substantial BRICK HOUSE with 7 rooms and a large Kitchen, a good Cellar and large Basement with the place in it, and a good spring piped to the basement door; large Frame Bank Barn with Wagon Shed, Corn Crib, and large Shed for farming implements attached, besides good Stabling and under good roof, a good Hog Pen 12 by 22 feet, good Poultry House, Wood House, Work Shop, Buggy House and all other necessary out-buildings—all built within 3 years; two good gardens and the yards around the house all enclosed with a good substantial picket fence, all new; a young Apple Orchard of 200 trees of the choicest fruit, with a good variety of other fruit, and a vineyard of 100 grapevines, ready to bear. The farm has all been limed within three years, and is in a good state of cultivation, and the fences are all in good order, the fields are conveniently laid off, so that stock can have access to a never-failing stream of water from any field on the farm.

The farm is well located and is calculated for either a Stock or Dairy Farm; and is in a good neighborhood, convenient to schools, churches, mills, &c. Persons wishing to view the property are requested to call on John Cluck, residing on the farm, or on the undersigned, near where the Conowago Paper Mill was.
July 31, '79. tf SAMUEL FISHER.

VALUABLE FARM AT PRIVATE SALE.

THE undersigned offer at private sale their VERY DESIRABLE FARM, situate in Menallen township, Adams county, Pa., about one mile southwest of Bendersville, adjoining Wm. Walsey, C. B. Rice and others, and containing 150 ACRES, more or less, about 25 acres being good timber. The farm land is very productive, and the fences are good. The improvements consist of a Two-story part Stone and part Roughcast DWELLING HOUSE, with Two-story Out-Kitchen, Bank Barn with Wagon Shed attached, a Wagon Shed with Corn Cribs, a Straw Shed nearly covering the barnyard, a large Work Shop, Ice House, Hog Pen, Hen House, and other out-buildings; a SAW MILL and a SHINGLE MILL, both nearly new and in good running order; a never-failing well of water at the house, running water in the barn-yard and in nearly every field; one of the largest and finest APPLE ORCHARDS in the county, just in full bearing condition, and hardly ever missing a crop; also a young Peach Orchard, with all other kinds of the best fruit—indeed the property should command unusual attention because of its extra fruit producing qualities. The land is principally copper-stone, which generally produces as well as limestone—is easily farmed and in every sense satisfactory. The water cannot be excelled. Altogether the farm is among the most desirable in the county. Persons wishing to view it are requested to call on the first-named, residing thereon. For further particulars address, to Bendersville,
J. H. RAFFENSPERGER,

Solomon Lease and Susannah Lease vs. Michael Rebert and Michael Sheaffer. Settled.

Dillsburg Bank vs. Frederick Winand. To be tried without a jury December 22d.

Charles F. Markley vs. Jacob Marx. Summons in assumpsit. Verdict for defendant for $17.26.

Jacob B. Young vs. John Cain. Foreign attachment. Judgment of non suit.

James Wilson, Executor of Catharine Gulian, deceased, vs. John Cain. Foreign attachment. Judgment of non suit.

William Haeller vs. Sarah J. and George M. Howell. Summons in ejectment. On trial.

A jury was drawn in the Wickersham and Burkholder & Meals case yesterday, and the rest of the jurors discharged.

Peddler's license granted to Col. W. F. Walter.

Ten cases continued to January term.

DEATH OF A LEARNED PRIEST.—We learn from the Baltimore Sun that Rev. John O'Brien, A. M., professor of sacred liturgy at Mt. St. Mary's College, Emmitsburg, Md., died at that institution on Friday afternoon, from a pulmonary affection, by which his health had been slowly undermined. He had a severe hemorrhage shortly before his death. Prof. O'Brien was a native of Ireland, but, coming to this country, he was for a time connected with the Diocese of Philadelphia, and had been professor at Mt. St. Mary's College a number of years. He was about in the 45th year of his age. Two years ago he revisited his native home and friends in Ireland. Prof. O'Brien was an author, and was well known by a work entitled "The Holy Mass," a history of the mass and its ceremonies, an exhaustive and learned work, and the only one of the kind in English. It has reached a fourth edition in a few years, an unusual success for a book of that kind. He was very plain and simple in his manners, and showed no self-consciousness of the fine talents and culture he really possessed. He was greatly loved by his friends and pupils. His funeral took place at Emmitsburg at nine o'clock on Sunday morning.

SIMMONS'S MINSTRELS.—The celebrated Commedian and End Man, Lew. Simmons (lately of Simmons & Rankins,) has organized the best minstrel company in America, and will exhibit in Agricultural Hall, Gettysburg, to-morrow (Friday) evening, Dec. 12th. The company embraces Lew. Simmons, Billy Bryant, Frank. Hawley, Tommy Cooper, Eph. Horn, Jr., D. A. Harrison, F. Barker, an unrivalled quartette consisting of Wm. Jones, basso, Wm. Morrill, baritone, J. Shinkle, first tenor, and Walter Clair, second tenor, and other celebrities in their several walks. The entertainment will be varied and first class. The brass band and orchestra will be under the able leadership of Prof. H. J. Koeing.

Lew. Simmons is drawing crowded houses everywhere, and will doubtless have the same substantial compliment at Gettysburg.

AMERICAN Silk Manufacturers have reached the stage of perfection, and so has Dr. Coxe's combination of wild cherry and seneka. Persons having used this valuable medicine for croup, coughs and colds, say no improvement can be made. Price 25 and 50 cents.

"NIP your cough in the bud," said Horace Greeley, by taking "Dr. Sellers' Cough Syrup." Lose no time in getting a bottle.

WE want every one in town and country to come and see our Toys, Fancy Articles, &c., which we have selected with care, from the leading Toy Houses in the cities, which we pride ourself are the finest out of the cities.

You will find anything you want for the big and little folks—from a penny whistle to a ten dollar doll.

Also a very large stock of fancy and common Candies of unsurpassed manufacture, with every variety of Fruit and Nuts. Next door to Keystone Hotel, Gettysburg.
Dec. 11. 2t EPH. H. MINNIGH.

THE ladies of Gettysburg are justly noted for the taste displayed in the selection of their Shoes. I would call their attention to the "Carlisle Shoe." It cannot be surpassed for style and fit. Is durable and always looks well. Gives satisfaction in all cases. I have all sizes in Pebble, French Kid, Cloth and Serge, lace and button, both side and front. Call and see them at Mrs. M. Spangler's Shoe Store—the open front—second door south of Diamond, Baltimore street, Gettysburg. Dec. 11. tf

THE ADVANTAGES OF CISTERNS.—The present drouth in Eastern Pennsylvania points in a certain direction so unmistakably that hardly a person in the whole community can fail to see and understand it. Wells have given out, many of the smaller water courses are dried up, and even the larger streams are running low. In many places water for stock is found only at considerable distances from the farmyard, while for household purposes it must be brought from a distance. We need not tell our readers there is a plain and not difficult remedy for all this. Every householder has it in his power to relieve himself from this embarrassment. All who are sufferers from this cause to-day have themselves only to blame.

Rain water cisterns or reservoirs afford a complete remedy for the present evil, so far as water for household and stock needs are concerned. A cistern is not a costly structure. Farmers have it in their power to build them at a very moderate expenditure. The excavation might be done by the ordinary farm hands in odd hours. The materials could be hauled in the same way at a minimum cost. In fact, the completed structure would be so inexpensive that its cost would be returned in a few seasons like the present, while the cistern itself would be serviceable for a lifetime. In cities the cost would be somewhat more, but as only water for household purposes would be required, the reservoirs might be constructed on a more limited scale, and the cost would be correspondingly less. The rain fall anywhere in Pennsylvania is sufficient during the year to fill a cistern and almost keep it so if the necessary roof attachments are made. When all this is done the housewife can look a water famine in the face without the dread of having to undergo the inconveniences that now present themselves when there comes a dry spell like the present. It is no little satisfaction in times like the present to feel that whether or not wells fill up and the streams rise, there is nevertheless an ample store of water at hand for all probable emergencies.

There is besides one other fact that should not be lost sight of. For every purpose whatsoever, rain water is far preferable to all others. The hard water of the ordinary wells, or the soft water of the running streams, falls far behind rain water in many particulars. Rain water as it comes from the clouds is almost chemically pure; before coming in contact with roofs, spouts and cisterns, distilled water itself is hardly purer. It is neither difficult nor expensive to attach filterers to cisterns, which will give consumers a water so much better than any they can procure in other ways that even a comparison seems out of order. Besides, rain water is better for every household purpose than harder water. For culinary purposes its superiority is fully as great as for washing, or other uses. It is well known that hard, limestone water is largely instrumental in inducing a certain class of most serious and painful diseases, whose recurrence can almost certainly be avoided by the exclusive use of cistern water. Cisterns which are properly constructed will preserve a degree of coldness equal to the best wells. The taste of rain water is not as agreeable to many persons as that of wells and running springs, but this is purely a matter of custom and education, and because rain water is so seldom procurable in its best and purest condition. When used in a filtered condition the palate of most people soon becomes accustomed to the taste of cistern water, and in a little while it is as acceptable as the harsher water of wells. In short, the advantages are all on its side, and it is to be desired for many reasons that every house, both in town and country, shall, before many years, possess reservoirs for storing it up against a time of need.—Lancaster New Era.

—This advice is as good for Gettysburg and Adams county as it is for Lancaster city and county, and no suggestion of more real benefit could be made. Not only would the general building of cisterns relieve "water famines" for ordinary house or farm use, but in case of fire great service could be expected of them. Every property should have a cistern, and a general stir on the subject among our people may be the means of adding scores of them to the water supply of Gettysburg next spring.

THE Waynesboro' Discussion came to a close on Thanksgiving day. In the evening Elder Jacob Snider gave a supper of oysters, coffee, &c., to the disputants and friends, to the number of about twenty, including Elder Bashor, Revs. Burgstresser, Keith, Motter, Stouffer, and others, Tunkers, Lutherans, German Reformed, Methodists, Presbyterians, ministers, deacons, &c.

Rev. Bashor remarked that he had labored faithfully to convert the Rev. Mr. Bergstresser to the Dunkards. To this, the latter rejoined that he had as earnestly tried to bring Elder Bashor over to the Lutherans, but so far without encouraging success. Then, the principal moderator, Rev. Mr. Keith, said, that to settle the matter, he would take each disputant by the hand and welcome them into the Methodist Church on a six months probation. He thought there was no better compromise. But the Rev. Dr. Russell playfully suggested that he knew a better one, namely, that they all be Reformed!

At the close of the social time had during the supper, Rev. W. H. Keith, Prest. Moderator, presented the disputants with twenty-seven dollars each, being the amount collected at the door of the church on the last evening of the debate.

The discussion will be published in a book, and sold at 50 cents per copy.

S. S. CONVENTION.—The third annual S. S. Convention of the Presbytery of Carlisle, will be held at Newport, Perry co. Pa., on the 9th and 10th days of December. Committee, R. F. McClean, S. C. George, W. A. McCarrell, W. S. Amberson and David Dettich. The opening address will be delivered by Rev. R. F. McClean, from the words, "Why Are We Here?"

PUSHING ADVERTISING TOO FAR.—"Bless my soul!" said Col. Crawford, last Sunday morning, "This is too bad! Here's Bull's Cough Syrup in the Bible!" The Colonel took off his specs, rubbed them carefully and looked again. "Yes! here in the 23d chapter of Isaiah, 15th verse,—Over 500,000 bottles of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, &c., Well, I thought that Bull got everywhere else except in the Bible. Now I'll give it up; it must be a good thing." Mrs. C. came in and explained that she had cut the slip out of a newspaper and put it in her Bible for safe keeping and it had stuck to the leaf. So the Colonel was satisfied.—Staunton, Va. Vindicator.

MORE ABOUT MOUNTAIN PEOPLE.—Having read "Rambler's" description of "Mountain People," and having lived most of my life among them, I desire to say a word in regard to them. I have also lived several years, on either side of the mountain, on the plains of Franklin and the lower end of Adams counties, and have been very kindly treated by the masses of either neighborhood, but for genuine friendship and hospitality, the mountain people stand at the head of the list. If we start on top of the mountain, at Mr. E. Newman's, for instance, and go through the Valley northeast for miles, we will find the people in general as intelligent and happy as their more favored brethren on the plains; and that most of them have good farms and nearly all have comfortable homes. We have some of the class that "Rambler" describes, we admit, but that class is far in the minority. And where is the place that you do not find a fair sprinkling of this same class, even in our best towns? You need not search long for one so illiterate as even "Nancy," but we are happy to say such characters are an exception, both in and out of the mountain.

I hope "Rambler" will pardon my poor effort to show the other side of the picture of "Mountain People." I have always read his articles with pleasure, and hope to continue to do so in the future. DIXY.

MR. BELTZHOOVER, of this district, has introduced in Congress a bill to equalize and fix the rate of pensions to soldiers disabled in the late war. It provides that such soldiers and sailors shall be allowed the same fractional or proportional part of the amounts of pensions at present allowed for total disability or loss of limb as the amount originally granted was to the amount allowed for total disability at the time such pension was originally granted. The bill was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

ST. NICHOLAS for December is by all odds the handsomest number of any youths' magazine we have ever seen. The cover in itself is a treat. When we say that there are contributions by Louisa M. Alcott, J. W. Deforest, J. T. Trowbridge, J. Esten Cooke, John G. Whittier, Sarah Winter Kellogg, Edward Eggleston, Lucy Larcom and a dozen other well known writers, with pretty and interesting illustrations on almost every page, the intelligent reader will understand that our praise is not exaggerated. We advise all the young folks, their sisters, their cousins and their aunts, to become readers of ST. NICHOLAS. Scribner & Co., New York.

SHORT STOPS.—341,100 acres of Georgia are owned by negroes, an increase of 30,300 acres over last year's statistics.

—Mark Twain is forty-five years old.

—Peter Cooper is almost ninety years old.

—Our oyster dealers are shipping largely to England.

—The irreconcilable Bob Toombs is worth half a million.

—The new Pullman palace cars are very luxurious, costing each $15,000. Ordinary passenger cars cost $4,000; drawing-room cars, $8,000; mail and baggage cars, $2,000; box cars, $400.

—The sixty-mile bicycle race in Chicago was won by Terrant, who beat Belard and the Harrison brothers. Time, 3 hours 34 min. 30 secs.

—Wm. H. Vanderbilt, of New York, now owns $10,000,000 of Government four per cents.

—Nervous people who own pistols should be exceedingly careful how they use them. Wm. Yocum, of South Bethlehem, Pa., shot his brother, aged ten years, on Wednesday night, inflicting a fatal wound, under the supposition that he was a burglar.

—The total number of Indians in the United States at this time, according to Secretary Schurz, is 250,000.

—The Permanent Exhibition Company at Philadelphia have passed a resolution offering the exposition building to the two great political parties for their national conventions next year.

—Owing to the prompt and energetic protest of the people of Philadelphia, echoed unanimously by the press of the city, the Permanent Exhibition is to remain.

—3,300 men are employed in the Altoona car shops.

—Megargee's paper warehouse, in Philadelphia, was burned on Monday.

—A fair was held in Philadelphia Tuesday night week, at the Presbyterian Church, corner of Broad and Oxford streets, to defray the expenses of a new organ. Early Wednesday morning some of the decorations caught fire, and the new organ and the whole interior of the church were destroyed. The church cost $150,000 ten years ago. The stone walls and the steeple remain, and the loss is estimated at $100,000, insurance $50,000.

—Over 4,000 turkeys and 1,000 geese and ducks were shipped from Ingersoll, Ont., on Friday, for England. Large numbers are also being shipped from other points in Canada.

—E. P. Willett and G. Williams have been arrested at Cincinnati for making and selling counterfeit coin and fifty-cent notes.

—Two hundred tons of salt pork from the South, via the Danville railroad, has been received in Baltimore, a novelty in trade, as Baltimore usually sends pork southward.

—Robert Egnbett was convicted of being a tramp in Franklin county, Ohio, on Friday. The penalty is from one to three years' confinement in the penitentiary.

—Monuments for Generals Hooker and Meade in the shape of equestrian statues are now proposed for some of the vacant squares in Washington.

—A colored man in a drug store at Scottsboro', Alabama, was offered some candy and a nickel if he would bite a ten-penny nail in two. And the Louisville Courier-Journal has the monumental serean cheek to tell us that he succeeded.

—Never say die. "Depart this transitory existence" is a much more elegant style of remark.

—Is it not in accordance with the eternal fitness of things that a man who stole the Presidency should have his message stolen?

—One hundred horses were burned with the Eighth Avenue car stables, New York, Tuesday night week. The sight was horrible.

—The Chinese are going home, and their numbers in this country have been considerably reduced during the present year.

—James Burns was arrested at New York on Saturday for passing counterfeit trade dollars.

—The fair of the New York "Seventh," for the benefit of its building fund, was quite an affair. The receipts are moderately estimated at $100,000.

—Judge W. W. Ketcham, of the United States district court, died at Pittsburg, on Friday.

—Senator Bayard has introduced a bill to take away the legal tender quality of the greenbacks.

—Harry Reese, of Allegheny county, while out gunning, had his right arm shattered and bled to death. He was a school boy.

—Henry Myers, residing near Campbellstown, Lebanon county, has in his possession ten bundles of rye straw that were cut with a sickle sixty years ago.

HEALTH BETTER THAN GOLD.—Reader have you the PILES? Do you want to be CURED? If so call on Dr. A. W. Brinkerhoff, of Ohio, at the Eagle Hotel, Gettysburg, Pa., on Saturday, Dec. 20th and 27th, 1879, and January 3d and 10th, 1880. NO CURE, NO PAY. TREATMENT PAINLESS! Dr. B. will give $1,000 for any case he can't cure!

He now has nearly 500 patients in Ohio and Indiana, and only visits Gettysburg to see friends and to rest.

Physicians desiring to know this wonderful cure and secure Dr. B's. patented instruments and medicines for treatment, should attend on ONE or more of above days. Many have so done in Ohio and Indiana! This is no HUMBUG—but SOLID FACT and TRUTH.

WHEAT FOR CHICKENS

Every farmer has noticed that about the time of wheat harvest, if the fowls are allowed the run of the fields and barnyards, there is a material increase in the egg supply I think the second fact is the natural result of the first I have fed corn, oats, barley, buckwheat, flax and sunflower seeds, and have found nothing equal to whole wheat as food for fowls For young chicks it seems especially adapted. After two or three days of feeding on soft food the young chickens will pick up the wheat quite greedily, and will thrive on it as on nothing else Growing chickens have a large demand for lime, and especially bone material, and this is more nearly supplied in whole wheat than in any other grain If wheat were two dollars per bushel it would still be the cheapest feed for young chicks Farmers can, however, economize by feeding wheat screenings and damaged wheat, which, though unsalable, is nearly as good for chicken feed In feeding screenings, if there are many weed seeds, due allowance should be made, as they are not so nutritious as the wheat. Some kinds of weed seeds are hurtful to chickens, but these they will reject if fed whole. Grinding weed seeds is of little benefit except to get rid of them, and this might better be done by fire, as they are of so little worth

Last winter we had several bushels of wheat so badly damaged by rain in harvest that it was condemned as worthless except for stock feed It was given quite liberally to the hens, alternating with corn, and though the winter was very unfavorable for egg-production, the hens commenced laying early and have produced a much larger quantity than ever before I attribute this to the damaged wheat, and shall see that wheat in some shape is supplied to the fowls hereafter. W T I Monroe county, N Y

If we would have fresh-laid eggs in winter time, we must use the pullets that have come from an early previous spring hatch, and we must provide them with warm houses, stimulating food and good care through the fall and early winter months

When we come to the breeding stock—from which in the succeeding spring we desire to produce fresh batches of chickens—then the later birds of the previous year, or the two and three-year old hens, that come into laying in February and March, will be profitable. Winter laid eggs are of no account for hatching purposes, except in the incubator And though it may be well enough to start an early brood or two annually, the bulk of all the hen-setting done in the north occurs to best advantage after the month of March every year.—Poultry World.

CURL IN THE PEACH.—Prof. Burrill, of Illinois, has recently made a thorough examination of the minute fungus which had long since been known to cause the curl in the leaf of the peach, and states that the name appropriately given to this fungus is Ascomyces deformans He has traced this fungus to the unopened buds. As the leaf expands it is carried along, and finally produces the well known deformity The young bark of a diseased twig is filled with the threads of the fungus and is sometimes distorted with ridges and swellings and blister-like excrescences Prof B therefore recommends the pruning away in winter of such twigs as may be found to be thus diseased, and committing them to the fire To this we would add the importance of keeping the trees in a vigorous state of growth, as feeble ones recover less rapidly The appearance of the curl is usually most conspicuous after a cold snap just after the leaves are expanded, this condition of the weather favoring the development of the fungus just as certain kinds of weather in summer develop the rust in wheat, the young rust plants existing previously within the stalks

THE PRICE OF WHEAT —The Germantown Telegraph says in 1772 wheat was worth $75 per bushel in this State, in Continental money. During the war of 1812, when most of our ports were blockaded, wheat reached a very high figure, and land in the vicinity of Germantown suitable for growing the cereal sold as high as $1,000 per acre. In 1862 and 1863 during the dark days of the rebellion, our farmers obtained as much as $5 00 per bushel for this grain It cost much more to raise the crop than at present, on account of the scarcity of field hands and hired help of every kind

JOSEPH GALBRAITH, of White House, Cumberland county, shipped from Carlisle to a Philadelphia firm, recently, one hundred bushels of white Canada oats weighing 45 pounds to the bushel, a gain of 10 bushels to the hundred He realized fifty cents per bushel of thirty-two pounds

A NEW variety of sweet potato is being cultivated in Kern county, the extreme southeast corner of California They call it Ocean Queen. Picked specimens weigh from fifteen to eighteen and twenty two pounds. The yield is so great that they are fed to hogs, which thrive amazingly and make extra pork. Recent tests suggest that they will make better and cheaper sugar than beets

SULPHUR FOR SCARLET FEVER.—The foreign medical journals quite generally notice the successful treatment of scarlet fever by Dr. H Pigeon, by the use of sulphur It appears that all the cases in which he employed this remedy were well marked, and the epidermis on the arms in each case came away like the skin of a snake. The patient was thoroughly anointed twice daily with sulphur ointment, and five or ten grains of sulphur given in a little jam three times a day. Sufficient sulphur was burned twice daily on coals on a shovel, to fill the room with the fumes, and, of course, was thoroughly inhaled by the patient Dr. Pigeon asserts that, under this mode of treatment, each case improved immediately, and none were over eight days in making a complete recovery.

CORN BREAD.—A correspondent in the Western Rural furnishes the readers of that valuable paper with the following receipt for making corn bread; we would recommend our readers to try Take one pint of buttermilk, one pint of sifted meal a half pint of sifted flour, a tablespoonful of molasses, a small teaspoonful of soda, and a "pinch" of salt. Bake for an hour and a half in a moderate oven

PARKER HOUSE ROLLS —Two quarts of flour one large spoon of lard, little salt, one pint of boiled milk (set aside until cool), one half cup sugar, one-half cup yeast Make a hole in the centre of the flour, put in milk, etc, and rise over night In the morning knead well, and let rise until noon, then cut into long narrow rolls, and let rise till tea time

CHOCOLATE JUMBLES —One cupful of butter, two of sugar, three of flour, four eggs, two cupfuls of grated chocolate, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a little salt, roll thin

BRINE FOR CORN BEEF.—Two gallons of water, one gallon of salt one-half pound of saltpetre, one and one-half pounds of brown sugar. Boil this mixture fifteen minutes. When cold, pour over the beef

GLASS vessels in a cylindrical form may be cut in two by tying around them a worsted thread, thoroughly wet with spirits of turpentine, and then setting fire to the thread.

IF brooms are wet in boiling suds once a week they will become very tough, will not cut a carpet, will last much longer and always sweep like a new broom.

IN A NUT SHELL

—The rumor is that Col A K. McClure, of the Philadelphia Times is about to sever his connection with the journal to enter the ministry of that Episcopal Church
